CONSISTENCY NOT INNOVATION....

While doing this write-up every year we look back... what is it that we have achieved in the past year? Also while planning for the New Year, we ponder over what next, what new are we going to do in the upcoming year?

But this thought came to my mind... Isn't doing the same thing over and over again better? Is consistency better off at times than Innovation? One should innovate, one should improve but the quest for novelty might not be right every time. At least not for our members who hate change.

Consistency builds dedication, helps improve outcomes, helps reduce anxiety, makes you love what you do. Too much of it could result in inertia but for couple of years is definitely a good idea...

So over and through the last year we have engaged our innocent minds in some consistent constructive activities. Healthy lifestyle, meditation, exercise, play, health and hygiene, self-care, physiotherapy, occupational therapy all with a blend of simplicity interwoven in our day to day routine.

Product making is part of our daily routine so we all were engaged in honing our skills and making different home décor items, beautiful torans as a welcome to our world, decorative lights to illuminate our lives, intricately designed eco-friendly rakhis to vouch for our safety and care for our environment, making teaching aids for pre-school children to enjoy and impart education, block printed cloth bags to do away with our plastic wastes and yes the mouthwatering delicious chocolates to uplift our moods.

We celebrated our national and religious festivals; Independence Day, Republic Day, Ganesh Chaturthi, Diwali and Christmas. These were coupled with fun filled energetic outdoor activities and picnics.

We have two new members in our board Mrs. Roopali Paranjape and Mrs. Madhuri Kelkar who have been our extended pillars so far and would be actively involved in our activities hereon.

Our beneficiaries, differently abled adults and their families have shown tremendous trust and faith in our endeavor and hence derived the benefits of being part of our system.

But however this year our beautiful world of activities, our positivity, encouragement and fun however ended with a Covid Lockdown. Right now we have partially shifted to a digital world but we look forward to engaging more constructively and actively as soon as things start normalizing or new normal sets in.

We thank our well-wishers, donors, customers, staff and members of our Anugraha family for their continued support in strengthening our organization and supporting our initiatives.
